INTRODUCTION

Sullamussalam Arabic College is a pioneer minority higher education institution situated in the backward region that gives high priority to serving society through various social welfare programs apart from the educational empowerment of the region. The college has a unique tradition to provide and extend support to the marginal sections who are living in the surrounding region. Social works play a crucial role in improving the lives of those who need it the most.

After achieving immense success in the innovative best practices of SOWP and CEP. The college decided to push itself beyond its limits. After discussions and gathering suggestions, the college concentrated its focus on a constantly ignored section of society, the Deaf.

The college named the Best Practice by 'AYAT: Voicing the Voiceless'. Where the word 'AYAT', in the Arabic language, stands for 'the sign of God'.

THE PRACTICE

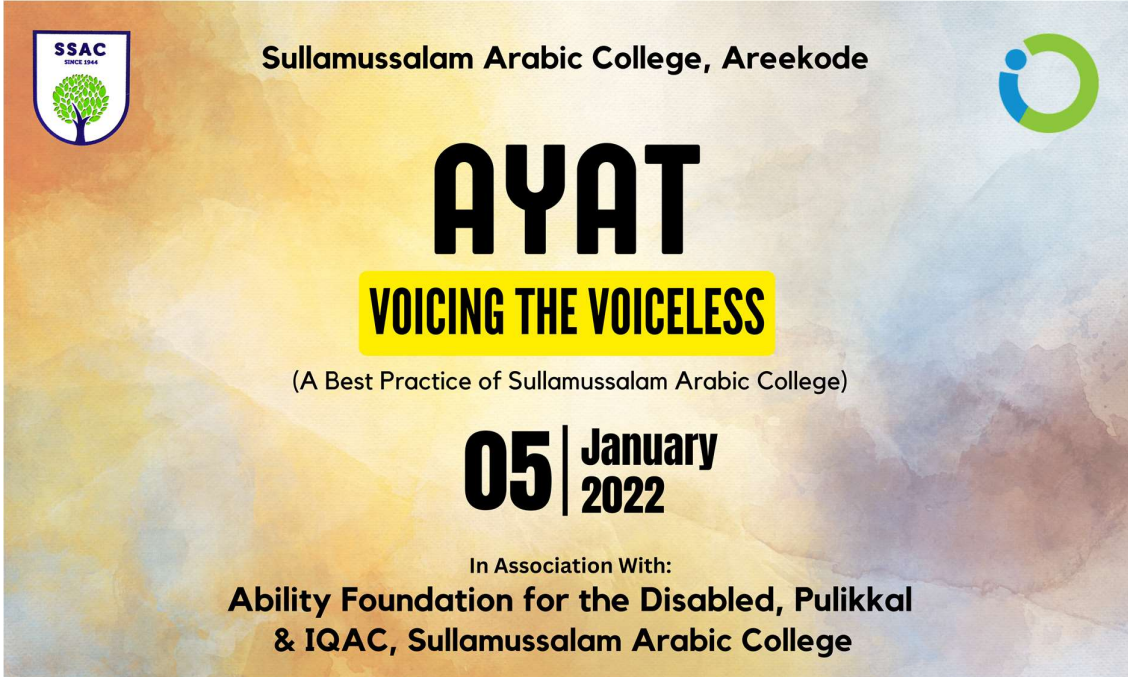

The college aims to train all of its students in the Sign language. And hired the best trainers in sign language in the region. In the initial stage, the institute selected one particular batch of students for training. The first batch is very well going on in the training and the institution is thoroughly studying the impacts and outcomes for improving the training program.

In the second stage, the college will expand the training to the other existing batches of students. As a part of the best practice the institution will sign an MoU with an eminent institution in training differently abled namely Ability Foundation for the disabled.

EVIDENCE OF SUCCESS

Even though it is too early to see the success of a best practice as it is still in its early stages of development, we see some pieces of evidence of the success. The students are showing interest and eagerness in the training program. The students are more vigilant about the problems concerning deaf people.
